Push for Women's Literacy

“We will not alienate women when it comes to education. It's equal opportunity, for women and men. In our society, we have nothing against women. We want women to participate just as men are participating. We hope that women will come forward. Going to school is a desire. You must have the desire to do so. You cannot be forced. So what we're doing is providing the facility for people to be enthused. To be ready to go to school to prepare themselves.”
Liberian President George Weah speaking to his French counterpart Emmanuel Macron at a recent meeting at the Elysee Palace in Paris, France.
